Databases A-Z

Databases A-Z lists all of the databases that the Bodleian Libraries subscribes to.

Finding a specific database when you know its title

By default, databases are arranged alphabetically. If you know the name of the database you would like to use, you can find it in two ways:

1) Select from the top of the page the letter that the databases starts with. For instance, if I was looking for the database Web of Science, I would click ‘W’ to narrow down the results.

Select the letter that the database you are looking for starts with.
2) Search for the database title in the search box.

Browsing databases in your subject area
If you are not sure which databases are useful for your subject area, you can browse by subject. To do this:
In the ‘All subjects’ drop down menu, select your subject area.
Narrowing down databases by type

There are databases that provide different types of resources including images and maps. Unless you are researching these, it is recommended that you select the database type ‘Abstracts/indexes’. This will show you databases that have resources like articles and bibliographic indexes.

Resetting filters

To reset any filters you have created in Databases A-Z, click ‘Clear Filters/Browse All Databases’.
