Introduction

The Online Catalogues of Archives and Manuscripts represent only a part of the manuscript holdings in the Bodleian Library. Here you will find descriptions of archives and manuscripts which have been catalogued after 2001, some retrospective digital conversions of earlier unpublished catalogues; and collection-level descriptions of most of the collections catalogued in our published hardcopy catalogues.

Visit the Special Collections LibGuides for further information, including details of other relevant finding aids.

For a list of recent additions to the online catalogues, see the revision log.

Administrative/Biographical History

The United Society for the Propagation of the Gospel (USPG) came into existence on 1 January 1665. It was formed by the merger of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts (SPG) and the Universities' Mission to Central Africa (UMCA). On 1 January 1968 the Cambridge Mission to Delhi (CMD) also joined USPG.

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts (SPG) was the inspiration of the Revd Dr. Thomas Bray. At the end of the 17th century he visited Maryland on behalf of the Bishop of London and found the Church of England in the American Colonies to be disorganised and with little spiritual vitality. Following his return to England, Dr. Bray obtained a charter from King William III, which was issued on 16 June 1701. The charter established SPG as an organisation able to send priests and schoolteachers to America to help provide the Church's ministry to the colonists and to take the message of the gospel to the slaves and native Americans. The Society's first missionaries began work in America in 1702 and, by the time the USA claimed independence, SPG had supported the work of about 300 men (plus a tiny number of school mistresses) and had made a substantial contribution to the foundation of the Episcopal Church.

Soon after 1701 the SPG's horizons began to expand, first to the West Indies and Nova Scotia and later in the 18th century to the rest of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and West Africa. Early in the 19th century SPG began sending missionaries to countries where migrants from Britain and Ireland were not present in large numbers, such as India (1820) and South Africa (1821). Work among indigenous people came to be a higher priority than care of the colonists, although the emphasis on pastoral ministry and education remained. During the second half of the 19th century there were new developments. The Society allowed women, including single women, from Britain and Ireland to be missionaries in their own right, rather than only as the wives of male missionaries. Increasing numbers of indigenous missionaries, both men and women, were supported in their work by the SPG. Medical work came to be recognised as an effective means of Christian ministry, demonstrating God's love for everyone. The Society also began to work in countries outside the British Empire, such as China (1863) and Japan (1873). From this period until the Second World War the pattern of mission work remained similar: pastoral, evangelistic, educational and medical work contributing to the growth of the Anglican Church and aiming to improve the lives of the people.

David Livingstone's return from Africa in 1857 led to the formation of Universities' Mission to Central Africa (UMCA). Following a challenge issued during his lectures in Cambridge and Oxford, the universities prepared to send a mission to central Africa led by a bishop. Charles Mackenzie was consecrated in 1860 and the next year sailed up the Zambezi and Shire rivers with a small group to start work. Malawi soon took its toll so Mackenzie's successor, Bishop William Tozer, abandoned the area around Lake Nyasa and moved his base to the island of Zanzibar in 1864. Establishing the Mission's work and opposing the East African slave trade were the initial priorities. UMCA's return to Lake Nyasa came later, this time overland via mission stations established on mainland Africa (now Tanzania) during the late 1870s and early 1880s. Two missionaries, Charles Janson and William Percival Johnson, finally reached the Lake in 1884. For the next 25 years UMCA's work developed in Zanzibar, Tanganyika, Nyasaland (now Malawi) and the north of Portuguese East Africa ( Mozambique), but spread no further geographically until 1910 when the Mission began work in Northern Rhodesia (Zambia).

UMCA aimed to establish the church in Central Africa and both men and women were involved from its earliest days in contributing to making this a reality. Evangelistic, pastoral and educational work were all carried out by both Africans and Europeans. Medical work soon became an important addition and one of UMCA's major contributions in this sphere was its participation in the fight against leprosy.

The Cambridge Mission to Delhi (CMD) was one of a number of missions launched from universities in Britain and Ireland. The Cambridge theologian RP Westcott's vision of a serious and peaceful engagement with Indian religious traditions led CMD's contribution to the growth and life of the Anglican Church in the 300 years of the Society's existence.

Hill, Sir Stephen John (1809–1891), colonial governor, born on 10 June 1809, was the son of Major William Hill and his wife, Sarah. He entered the army in 1823, became lieutenant in 1825, and was promoted captain in 1842. On 30 November 1829 he married Sarah Ann, the daughter of William Vesey Munnings, chief justice of the Bahamas. In 1849 he commanded an expedition which proceeded 80 miles up the River Gambia. On 6 May he stormed and destroyed the fortified town of Bambacoo, and on the following day attacked and partially destroyed the fortified town of Keenum; he also fought a successful action on the plains of Quenella. He commanded a detachment of the 2nd and 3rd West India regiments in a successful attack by the British and French naval and land forces under Commodore Fanshawe on the pirates of the island of Basis, on the Juba River, west Africa. For this service he received the thanks of the lords of the Admiralty and the brevet rank of major.

Co-operative Africana Microform Project: CAMP

https://www.crl.edu/programs/camp

• CAMP is based at the Center for Research Libraries, University of Chicago

• CAMP promotes the preservation through microfilming of publications and archives on and from Africa.

• It then makes these available on request to students and researchers at member libraries, of which the Bodleian is one.

• Materials so acquired and conserved include mainly historic newspapers and journals; government publications; personal and corporate archives; personal papers of scholars, government leaders and journalists; writings in European and African languages.

• Contact library staff to borrow CAMP material.

No. 235 Letter from Mr. Samuel to Earl Curzon[241/1] [E 3109/131/44]

Private and personal

ON BOARD S.S. 'HELOAN', April 2, 1920[241/2]

Dear Lord Curzon,

After two months in Palestine, I have now concluded my visit there. I received a fortnight ago from the Emir Feisal, whom I had met several times in London, a friendly invitation to go on to Damascus and to stay with him. On personal grounds I should have been glad to accept it, but at the present juncture I thought it inexpedient.

I have written a short report, addressed to Lord Allenby, on the administrative and financial matters relating to Palestine, on which he had invited me to advise. No doubt he will forward a copy to the Foreign Office.[241/3] I have left with General Bols, the Chief Administrator, memoranda in greater detail on several specific points. This letter gives a summary of the conclusions I have formed on the political situation in Palestine, particularly with reference to the declarations of the Syrian Congress at Damascus on March 8th in favour of an independent and united Syria, to include Palestine, under the kingship of Faisal.

The movement in Palestine for its union with Syria springs from several sources.

It is absurd to suggest that the speech of the Colonial Secretary about the Indians in Kenya affords the slightest parallel to this incident. Upwards of 40 separate Crown Colonies are administered directly from the Colonial Office in regard to which a continued flow of decisions have to be given from month to month, and almost from day to day, of a purely departmental character. The case of the Indians in Kenya and their relations to the white settlers and to the native inhabitants of the country, who form of course the overwhelming majority, has always hitherto been dealt with by the Colonial Secretary of the day on his own responsibility without it having been considered necessary to invoke the intervention of any other authority.

The telephone service of the Sumatra East Coast is under the management of the Deli Spoorweg Maatschappij, the same company which owns the railways. The cost of maintaining the telephone system had increased to the point where it was no longer profitable; an appeal was made to the Colonial Government at Buitenzorg, Java for permission to increase the rates.

The rates in use at the present time were established by the Colonial Government in October 1905. This was some years before the culture of rubber had greatly augmented the business of this district.

The old rates are given below:

Mongolian attitude toward relations with U.S., detailed
U.S.-Chilean Relations [Attached to Cover Memorandum Dated April 2, 1971 Entitled "Memorandum of Conversation with Chilean Ambassador"; Includes Distribution List]

DTRA collection: Chile and the United States

Ambassador Letelier referred to his meeting with Secretary Rogers and the President, noting that he had indicated to them that his Government is interested in having a high US official visit Chile. He noted that a US Air Force Delegation was visiting Chile at the present time.

Ambassador Letelier indicated that he has been trying to explain what the Chilean Government is and what it is trying to do. He noted that there were many misconceptions about Chile and a tendency to oversimplify by making analogies to other places. One aspect to which he referred was the Chileanization of copper. The Ambassador noted the status of the constitutional amendment and indicated that the matter of the law would be finished in about three to four months. He felt the amendment was not too rigid

Value of newspapers

Newspapers are generally aimed at the general public or particular groups of the general public. They are useful to find out about key events, people and places. They include opinion pieces, of either writers, editors or members of the public in form of Letters to the Editor. They are also a wonderful source for all sorts of ephemera (weather, court circulars, advertising, etc.). Larger newspapers will also provide battle or war reports, law or court reports and parliamentary reports, incl. occasional reproductions of full text speeches.

Understanding the context of your newspaper

To use newspapers as a source responsibly, you really need to understand the context of each newspaper. For instance, newspapers were often used for propaganda...

Oral History Project

The Oral History interviews consist of audio taped interviews with public figures in Lebanon and the Middle East during the late 1960’s and early 70’s. CAMES transcribes the interviews into written Arabic. These interviews are gradually being made available to the public in collaboration with the Digital Documentation Center at AUB. You may access the interviews within AUB by following the hyperlinks next to the photographs below:

LibGuide to Caribbean Studies

This ‘Getting Started’ page gives you links to key resources and information for Caribbean Studies on history, politics and economics. The tabs above lead to more in-depth information about different types of resources including books, journals, theses, film and news.

The main Oxford libraries for Caribbean Studies are the Bodleian Latin American Centre Library and the Bodleian Library.

This LibGuide does not cover Caribbean Literature collections that are held on the Taylor Institution Library and the English Faculty Library.

The links on the right-hand side provide library and contact information for Rebeca Otazu, Senior Library Assistant. You may also contact Frank Egerton, Librarian and Subject Consultant (Latin American History and Social Sciences), for subject enquiries.
